• MY PROSECCO BAR •

Prosecco is a sparkling wine made predominantly in the north east Italian region of Veneto using Glera grapes. Whilst travelling and filming in Italy I have been lucky to meet some amazing families that have been producing Prosecco for generations.

At My Prosecco bar I wanted you to have the opportunity to try as many different Prosecco as possible, that's why so many are available by the glass at "fantastico" prices! Whilst enjoying remember this, Champagne is from France and Prosecco is from Italy... Salute!

FRIZZANTE OR SPUMANTE?

We offer a Frizzante (semi-sparkling) which creates a wonderful sprinkling of bubbles in your mouth. The Spumante (sparkling) is the most popular of Prosecco styles... an orchestra of bubbles dancing on your palate! Give them both a try and see which is your favourite.

BRUT, EXTRA DRY OR DRY?

With the bubble choice sorted, you now need to think about the style of required dryness. The most popular style is 'Brut' which features often in our list and gives the driest mouthfeel. The 'Extra Dry' has the most elegant perception of slight sweetness that leaves your mouth feeling caressed. 'Dry' is a sweeter sensation, but never overpowering...

CHARACTER AND TASTING NOTES

The popularity of Prosecco is down to its light, easy-drinking style. With its citrus freshness, green apple and pear notes, what's there not to love about Prosecco!

• SPARKLING WINES •

The region of Lombardia produces stunning 'Metodo Classico' sparkling wines, made using the same production method and grape varieties as Champagne. These wines offer a richer, fuller, more intense mouthful and a fantastic alternative to the Prosecco style of sparkle. Along with sparkling rosés and a wonderful semi-sparkling sweeter style Brachetto, we have all bases covered for your enjoyment.

• CHAMPAGNE •

Champagne is produced in the North East region of France, it evolved from a pale, pinkish wine to what we have today, a delicious sparkling celebratory wine. With worldwide recognised Champagne houses in our list we wish you to dip in to the 'Salut' way of enjoying your fizz ..... but never forget the 'Salute'!

• BELLINIS •

It is impossible to go to Venezia without going to Harry's Bar for a Bellini. The iconic venue just off the Grand Canal was where Giuseppe Cipriani, the proprietor, perfected the art of blending peaches with Prosecco. To make mine, I roast white peaches in the oven with a little sugar, puree, then stir them with Prosecco. I love the Bellini as you can play around with the recipe. The original roasted peach recipe will always be close to my heart but I thought you might like to try one of my variations.

• PROSECCO COCKTAILS •

There is much more to Prosecco cocktails than Venezia's Bellini. Italy is the origin of other mixed drinks that have risen to prominence in the cocktail bars of New York, London and Paris.

A respected Milan bartender, Mirko Stochetto, added cocktails to Bar Basso's drinks menu in the late 1960s to compete with the city's burgeoning hotel and café scene. Sbagliato means 'messed up' in Italian and refers to a particular evening when a Bar Basso bartender had mistakenly left a bottle of Prosecco where the gin should have been. As Stochetto prepared a regular's Negroni, he accidentally poured the Prosecco into the same glass as the Campari and Rosso Vermouth. He finished the drink at the request of his guest and the drink became known as Negroni 'Sbagliato'.

• AMARI COCKTAILS •

The tradition of making bitter-sweet liqueurs, known as Amari in my country, has been around for centuries. This style of cocktail is characterised by elements of bitterness which thankfully, like most Italians, I seem to be born with a tolerance to.
